I'd like to give my special thanks to Rural Women School and Helene for this precious training opportunity. It furthered my understanding in this Cooperative, apart from the technical training.

Under the trend of becoming the mainstream within the industry, the Cooperative has been taking shape. It makes an effective approach for women to start their own business and to improve their living standard. Through hard work, women gain respect and social status. The Cooperative, primarily based on peasants and with the women's right to join and quit by their own willingness, seeks for a common interest.

I learnt that internally we shall work for the future of the Cooperative in unity, in equality and in mutual assistance. Externally we shall get adjusted to various market changes, be bold to face up to challenges and new ideology, and to understand different opinions. Punctuality and efficiency shall be improved as well.

So far, the Cooperative has taken shape. However, a lot more remain to be done for the future challenges, especially the product quality, which proves the key to high market competence. A strict pre-production system, a decision-making system plus a distribution system make certain work flow. Finance is the core of modern economy.

The only way to have a solidified stand in the future China's or even the world's embroidering market is diligence, wisdom, team-play spirit and the power of financial literacy.

Despite a rather short nine-day training, I came to realize that the development or success of an enterprise doesn't fall merely on unity and hard work.

In the era when opportunities join hands with risks, the capability to seize chances, to hold the market, to courageously take and guard against risks is the path to success.
